

Mrs. Stewart Ill.

Mrs. Cora Wilson Stewart, founder of the "moonlight schools" in Rowan county, who has been making a lecture tour of Kentucky in the interest of education, is at the Jewish Hospital in Louisville suffering from a nervous breakdown, with which she was stricken Sunday morning at Paducah. She was removed to Louisville Tuesday, all engagements for other lectures in Western Kentucky being canceled. Her condition is not serious according to Dr. Anna Lawrence, the attending physician. Although the present illness of Mrs. Stewart caused her to cancel engagements at Fulton, Mayfield; Franklin, Madisonville, Hopkinsville and Guthrie, she hope to be able to continue her work within a few weeks.
